

Our super users are ready to lead their future moves!

Liverpool Health and Academic Precinct (LHAP) redevelopment commissioning team was excited to hold its second super user workshop, attended by more than 25 Liverpool Hospital staff.

Liverpool Hospital Acting General Manager Scott McGrath said the super users were passionate individuals who played an essential role in generating excitement and anticipation for patients, staff and the community moving into Stage 1 of the Liverpool Hospital redevelopment.

The commissioning team provided the super users with training on their roles and responsibilities to ensure a safe and efficient transition for patients and staff moving into the new Birthing Unit, Neonatal Intensive Care Unit, Pathology and more when the first stage of the $790 million redevelopment opens later this year.

Commissioning Manager Jodie Ekholm said it was a fantastic day and easy to see why these dedicated staff had been nominated as super users.

“I loved seeing the collegiality and real ‘can-do’ attitude of the team and I really looking forward to our next training sessions,” Ms Ekholm said.

“We also heard from a super user involved in the Emergency Department move in Campbelltown Hospital redevelopment who shared his experiences and insights.”

Easier wayfinding

Liverpool Hospital’s Community and Consumer Participation Network has given its tick of approval to the wayfinding signs for Stage 1 of the redevelopment.

Our team of wayfinding experts designed simple and clear signage that uses colour coordination to easily differentiate between staff and public areas – green will represent staff areas, while blue will represent public spaces.

Celebrating our amazing women

International Women’s Day on 8 March is the opportunity to celebrate the incredible women helping to shape the future of Liverpool Hospital through the $790 million Liverpool Health and Academic Precinct redevelopment.

More than 30 women are part of the project team, playing pivotal roles in the planning and construction of the once-in-a-generation project.

To celebrate and recognise the work of the women of LHAP, SWSLHD Redevelopment Director Karinn Marrone has marked 8 March as a day of celebration for the team.

“Without our amazing female staff, none of this would be possible, and it’s important we acknowledge the outstanding work they are doing on this incredible project,”

Ms Marrone said. “I thank all our women for their excellent work and commitment on this special day and every day.”

Pop into the pop-up!

The LHAP team shared information and answered questions from staff and the community with its pop-up stall on 20 February on the concourse at Liverpool Hospital – the first of many more to come.

The team chatted with both staff, patients and visitors about the upcoming opening of stage 1 on the project and future plans.

Drop in and visit our next stall on Tuesday 19 March on the ground floor main concourse near Entrance J to have a chat and find out more about the new hospital.
